*Tie; prize divided.

The Advocate subscription contest for boys and girls, aged 16 years or under, came to a close Wednesday night, December 23 at 8 o'clock with the result announced above.

Thursday morning $100, in cash prizes, were given to the winners, each prize being in the new style of 1908 gold pieces. As promised, the Advocate is ready to pay upon demand 20 per cent of the amount collected by all of the boys and girls who are not included in the list of prize winners.

On November 18th, the first announcement of this contest was made. Within a few days forty boys and girls were entered and the friendly race has been kept at a lively rate ever since. On December 3, Miss Teckla Ruff took the lead and maintained it by a narrow margin for nearly three weeks when she was overtaken on Tuesday by John Callan, who, on the morning of the closing day, was just 3 points ahead of her. Andrew Goebel was in third place, while the Hebron lad, Ren Comisford, was fourth. At the beginning of the last day there was a difference of only 23 points between the contestants; who stood first and the boy in fourth position.

The voting on Wednesday was lively. Some of the boys and girls who had votes "up their sleeves" brought them into this office and friends of the several candidates came in with new subscriptions.

It was impossible to announce the result until a late hour Wednesday night owing to the fact that each vote had to be examined and compared with the office record for a condition of the contest was that only NEW subscriptions counted in the award of prizes.

Some of the contestants misunderstood one rule of the contest and solicited people who were at the time subscribers of this paper but the Advocate impartially enforced the rule to count only new subscriptions. The record of each candidate's work may be seen at this office by any interested person.

The Advocate is well pleased with the work done by the boys and girls and cheerfully awards the prizes to the winners. This paper is also glad to pay all of the other boys and girls for the work they have done in increasing its subscription list.

An accurate count of the returns shows that by this contest the Advocate has added exactly 306 new subscriptions to its list. Each subscription is for a period of not less than five weeks and a large number run for period of six months to one year.

The contest was decided by points, each new Daily subscription for 5 weeks delivered in the city or 2 months by mail, counting one point.

Miss Ruff carries off first honors with 106 points, while John Callan, who takes second prize, has 104 points, or only two behind first place. Ren Comisford has a credit of 88 points and Andrew Goebel 55.

The Advocate congratulates the winners and thanks not only them but the other boys and girls who participated in the contest. The Advocate on behalf of the contestants and on its own account also, wishes to express its appreciation to the hundreds of people who have aided in making this contest a complete success. May the boys and girls and all of their friends have the merriest sort of a Christmas!

Miss Teckla Ruff, who wins first prize, $25 in gold, in the Advocate's subscription contest, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Ruff, 193 Jefferson street, who came to Newark from Louisville, Ky., about three years ago. Miss Teckla is 13 years of age and is in the seventh grade of St. Francis de Sales school.

This bright little girl was of course delighted when she came to the Advocate office Thursday morning and learned of her success. The first thing she asked was that an expression of her appreciation to the many friends who helped her to win be printed in the Advocate.

CLAUDIAS GETS LIFE SENTENCE

Oakland, Cal., Dec. 24.—Peter Claudias, convicted of dynamiting the home of James Gallagher, a witness in the graft cases at San Francisco, was sentenced to life imprisonment this morning.

RUFF NOT YET SENTENCED.

San Francisco, Dec. 24.—When Abe Ruff appeared for sentence this afternoon his attorney started reading an argument why sentence should be postponed. At a late hour the sentence had not been pronounced.

GRAFT CASE HEARING

Accused Men Bound Over in Heavy Bond for Court Trial

Votes Cost from $5 Up and Even Street Car Tickets Were Acceptable.

Pittsburg, Dec. 24.—Twenty-two more arrests are expected in connection with the council investigation now on. Business men offer help in running down the men who have been juggling the public's finances. It is expected the disclosures will exceed the San Francisco graft cases.

It is no secret that Magistrate Brady has signed a big bundle of blank warrants and subpoenas, these to be served as the case develops.

Director Lang said this morning that he had nothing to say regarding arrests made or those to come and was only sorry for the wives and children of the men implicated. Bribe givers as well as bribe takers figure in arrests to follow.

Pittsburg, Dec. 24.—Pittsburg has moved into first place in the role of corruption and municipal graft. Last night, after thunderbolts in the shape of sensational testimony had been expended, the trials of San Francisco appeared tame in comparison. And it is stated that the shocking developments of the day are mere preliminaries and that subsequent proceedings against additional councilmen and business men will not only startle Pittsburg, but the whole country.

From testimony offered in court the city council is corrupt in every sense of the word. It was intimated that over three score councilmen are "easy to reach" and the "reaching" necessitated only small sums, ranging (Continued on page 4, col. 3.)

LABOR LEADERS CONFIDENT OF REVERSAL OF DECISION

Washington, Dec. 24.—The desk of President Gompers' offices this morning was piled with telegrams saying that unions over the country would stand by him. President Roosevelt received many telegrams protesting against the ruling of the court sending Gompers and others to jail. Many believe if the men go to jail it will greatly advance the cause of labor, hailing them as martyrs to the cause. Gompers is confident Justice Wright's decision can be reversed in the court of appeals. A mass meeting of unions will be held over the country Sunday adopting resolutions regarding the ruling.

Washington, Dec. 24.—President Roosevelt today met the sympathetic appeal of labor organizations to prevent the imprisonment of Samuel Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison, by notifying Attorney General Bonaparte that he desires to go over with him the proceedings in the contempt case. The President feels that the appeals made to him are of sufficient importance to call for earnest consideration. "If the court of appeals upholds the decision against the Federation chiefs," said a well known labor leader today, "I believe the President will take a hand and pardon the defendants. Roosevelt is too good a politician to let such a good opportunity pass him by, as he will have, should the higher court order the labor leaders sent to prison. By pardoning them the President would earn the lasting gratitude of all working men in the country."

EMPLOYES

Of New York Parks Each Presented With Five Dollar Gold Pieces, by Mrs. Russell Sage.

New York, Dec. 24.—When Park Commissioner Smith reached his office in the Arsenal in Central Park yesterday, a messenger was awaiting him with a package. Opening it, he found $1,995 in five dollar gold pieces, with the message from Mrs. Sage that it be distributed among the park employees. Mrs. Sage made the same present to the men last year, each man receiving $5 as his share.

Gave Birth to Child on Train and Threw It Out of Window—Arrested on Murder Charge.

David City, Neb., Dec. 24.—An unidentified young woman gave birth to a child in the toilet room of a day coach on a Burlington train near here yesterday and then threw the child out of the window of the toilet room as the train was moving out of Columbus. The child was picked up a few minutes later and died soon afterward. The mother was arrested at Lincoln on a charge of murder.

Cleveland Man Makes Accessions—Contest Warming Up and Becoming Lively.

Columbus, O., Dec. 24.—Harry M. Daugherty Wednesday evening took himself out of the contest for United States senator, being the first of the minor candidates to quit the field. His retirement absolves the Franklin county delegation from any allegiance it might feel because of his residence here. This leaves four representatives and one senator to be striven for by the other candidates.

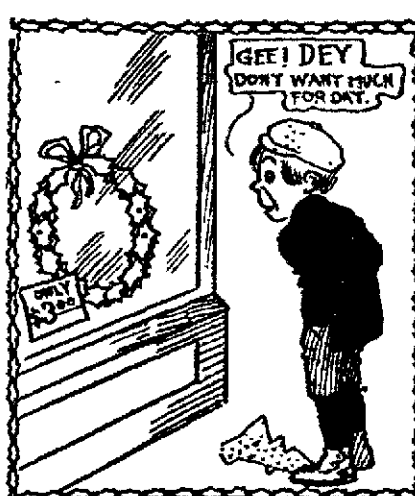

In making this valiant bow Mr. Daugherty confessed that he did for some time consider making a canvass for senator, but after reflection upon present conditions he had concluded not to do so. In other words, he does not enter the contest. This step was taken after a visit to a number of the headquarters of the remaining contenders.

It is not fair to say that the announcement was unexpected. In fact, it has been looked for. For some days it has been apparent that the Franklin county man could not hold the local delegation.

Representative A. B. Canfield, of Fulton county, who has been regarded as a Daugherty supporter, came to this city and declared for Burton in the fight from the Seventh and Eighth Congressional districts, where a contest was expected, showed that the Daugherty was not well grounded and the Daugherty came.

The only immediate effect upon general result will be to make it harder for those who are seeking (Continued on Page 4, 3rd Col.)

THE LITTLE GRAY LADY

(By F. Hopkinson Smith.)

The author of "Colonel Carter of Cartersville" and "The Fortunes of Oliver Horn" has written a delightful Christmas story which the Advocate takes pleasure in presenting to its readers today.

The Advocate has purchased the right to publish this charming story by a celebrated author, the reader knows of old the cordial genial spirit of his work and here is his newest story, "The Little Gray Lady." He gives you a charming, exquisite heroine and a felicitous, tears-and-laughter plot. It's a real Christmas story—but read it for yourself on page 7 of today's Advocate.

WILL ENFORCE CITY SCREEN ORDINANCE

Beginning Saturday Meat Dealers
Will be Forced to Cover All Meats Exhibited.

Saturday may witness a little interesting stir upon market, when the health department will begin its endeavors to enforce the meat-screening ordinance which was given a shaking up at Monday night's council meeting.

It seems that considerable feeling has been aroused by the recent efforts made to have the ordinance enforced. Newark meat dealers and grocers who have been required to cover all meat foods on display, have supported Councilman Kuster who brought the question up Monday night. The market people are about solid in opposition to him in his fight, but as such an ordinance has existed in the city for some years, they will probably have to abide by the enforcement of it. They claim that the treatment is unjust, while Mr. Kuster and his supporting friends declare that it is wholly just, since the market dealers are assessed such a small amount for the privilege of competing with local merchants with the result that much of the money taken in by them goes out of Newark and in three or four instances, entirely out of the county.

TOLEDO EDITOR MARRIED.

Xenia, Dec. 24.—W. C. Robertson telegraph editor of the Toledo News-Bee, and Miss Grace Randall, daughter of County Auditor-elect John Randall, of Eaton, were married by Rev. Henry J. Simpson, rector of Christ Episcopal church. Mrs. Robertson was a teacher in the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home.

MAIL DELIVERY

Carriers Will Make One City Delivery Xmas Day—Rural Carriers Will Cover Routes.

On Christmas the city carriers will make one complete delivery in the morning according to the word given out by Postmaster Heisey. The rural carriers will also make their usual delivery, Christmas being the only holiday upon which this requirement is made of the rural routes. Asst. Postmaster Siegfried informed an Advocate reporter that the business transacted during the past week has been enormous. For several days the office has been crowded all day long and the windows have been kept open after hours. There has been little rest for the clerks during the past week. In order to facilitate the handling of mail a number of additional clerks have been employed. In the register department there is one extra clerk and the stamp and package department which is in the postmaster's private office, has been presided over most of the time by Postmaster Heisey and Assistant Postmaster Siegfried, but on Thursday W. C. Jones, the mayor of Newark, was at the head of this department three extra men have been employed for six days each, and they will be able to get out all mail that comes in by tomorrow.

There seems to be a misunderstanding regarding the sealing of packages. The general public does not seem to understand that anything that is closed from inspection is classed as first class mail and chargeable at the rate of two cents per ounce. Parties have been in the habit of sealing their packages with small souvenir stamps. All this kind of matter comes under the head of first class mail.

INVESTIGATE INCENDIARY FIRES
Salem, Dec. 24.—Assistant State Fire Marshal J. T. McAninch of Cleveland, is in this city investigating fires of incendiary origin, which have caused much suspicion and excitement among residents. Fire first all within a few hours' time, early yesterday, kept the fire department on the run. Four suspects were arrested.

LADY MILLER RE-INSTATED

Lady Miller, the pretty little mare that was protested at the local track last fall on the grounds that she was racing at a slower mark than she was capable of, has been declared the money winner by the American Trotting Association at its meeting in Chicago.

The mare made good time in her races here, but was protested upon entrance by some other horsemen. Later on when she was taken to the Coshoccon county fair she was again protested. Her record was investigated and the little mare was declared O. K. and was given the purses she won under the protest.

FATALITY HURT BY FALL

Piqua, Dec. 24.—William Parker, foreman of the pipe line gang of the Miami Valley Gas and Fuel company, was killed by a fall from a scaffolding at the works of the company at Piqua, Ohio.

AMUSEMENTS

ROGERS AND MACKINTOSH.

At the Orphium this week in a high-class comedy society playlet, entitled "Out of Sight."

One of the funny situations in the playlet, "Out of Sight," at the Orphium. The Press Agent says: Al G. Field's Greater Minstrels will appear at the Auditorium theatre with the usual gathering of good singers, clever comedians with new steps and good music. The saying, "There's nothing new under the sun," cannot apply to the Field minstrels, for each year there is something new that adds interest to the performance, and creates a broader grin or a heartier spitting of hands from the audience. The only old things about the Field company this year are the favorite singers that pleased you so last season, and the extremely laughable stunts of the blackface comedians. The date is next Saturday.

Robert Rogers and Louise Mackintosh, in a high-class comedy society sketch, are the headliners for the last three days of this week at the Orphium theatre. Manager Moore, who has the pleasure of meeting these two clever people, personally vouches for the merit of this act, and said to the Advocate this morning that he would stand behind every word of praise uttered in behalf of Rogers and Mackintosh. That is sufficient for the patrons of the Orphium.

Kraft and Myrtle, in a singing and dancing turn, and Bernhard and Siefert, in a double Dutch act, are two more features of the week's end.

About Harry DeCoe, Harry Cranston is quoted. Everybody knows Harry—he has had more applause than any one who ever appeared behind the Orphium footlights—in fact he gets a hand before every act, when he comes to the front to remove the program cards, and when he has a table or chair to carry out the applause is terrific. Well, Harry says DeCoe has been worrying him all week, on account of the immense prop list sent on ahead.

"I tell you, pal," says Harry, "you know a guy like that, must have something good, and I'm doing my damndest to put him on strong." That is enough for that act.

A special Christmas matinee will be presented tomorrow, and reserved seat tickets may be ordered at any time previous to the performance by calling new phone 1266.

GOING RAPIDLY

Ninety Members of the Grand Army Pass Away Every Twenty-four Hours.

The Grand Army members are passing away at the rate of ninety a day, but the death rates for each month are often higher. In 1906, Grand Army survivors died at the number of 29,208 and in 1907 the loss was 31,201; for the year that closed June 1, 1908, the death rate will be unquestionably between 35,000 and 37,000 if not higher. For the old soldiers of the Republic now have reached the average age of 63. At that rate the death will come faster still and within a few years the noble army will be but a memory. Had the soldiers of the civil war not been mere lads in their teens, the Grand Army would long ere this have perished from the earth. But the Union was saved literally by the boys, boys in their teens and many had not even reached that age. Starting as this statement seems, it is indisputably borne out by the official records. There was 2,783,309 enlisted men in one late war.

Christmas Postcards.

Penny postcards enter largely into this year's Christmas trade. Many of the cards that formerly sold for a nickel can now be bought for a cent and the penny postcard is the cheapest scheme yet discovered for the satisfaction of the small Christmas obligations.

Holiday Travel.

The heavy holiday travel on the railroads begins today, when the holiday rates went into effect, and there has been a decided increase in travel over what it has been during the past week. Many persons who desire to spend both Christmas and New Year's day away from home have not been waiting for the special rates which have been granted this season, as the railroads are not offering rates extending over a period of both holidays. Passenger agents say that business is increasing, and the local business has been picking up remarkably. The through trains are well filled with passengers, as many students are en route from college to their homes for the holiday season. A large number of Chicago men are attending Denison university, and they chartered an entire Pullman car to make the trip home.

The express traffic has assumed greater proportions than it has in many years past, the local as well as express offices all over having been taxed to the utmost for some days to care for the large amount of business which has been thrust upon them.

Check Forger at Work.

A check forger got in his work on Wednesday at the book store of A. L. Norton, and stuck a phony check for $15 on one of the clerks. After purchasing $8 worth of goods he presented the check and received $7 change. The check was on the First National bank, and was made payable to J. L. Newton, and was indorsed with that name. The man is said to have claimed he was an architect with offices in the Trust building.

Labor Commissioner's Report.

According to the annual report for his department for 1907 just filed by State Labor Commissioner W. T. Lewis with Governor Harris, there was an increase in the year of 612 industrial establishments in the state, bringing the total up to 9,949. A total of $517,569,878 was invested in grounds, buildings and machinery of 479,770 employees, 41,066 are superintendents, salesmen and office help, who receive $46,834,617.60 of the $284,004,379.76 annually paid in wages.

Have Finished the Work.

Fred McDonald, a well known glass worker of this city, returned from Buckeye Lake Wednesday night with a gang of 40 glass blowers. Mr. McDonald had a contract for pulling and other work on Kimball's Island and the work was finished Wednesday. The 40 blowers worked for the time at laboring work for $2 per day because they were out of a job and no immediate prospects of work. By a great effort they finished the work Wednesday night so as to return home and spend Christmas with their families.

Mr. Hughes Recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hughes of Purity, has received word that their son, F. C. Hughes, formerly of this city, who suffered a slight stroke of paralysis recently, is rapidly recovering at Hot Springs, Ark., where he went for his health. Mr. Ed Doe, the west side merchant, also received a letter from Mr. Hughes, Wednesday, telling of his recovery. Mr. Doe employed Mr. Hughes in his clothing store here in 1898, and he continued with him for about seven years. Mr. Doe later started him in the clothing business in Marion where he was extremely successful.

Christmas Services.

The annual Christmas exercises of the Sunday school of the Fifth street Baptist church were held in the church Wednesday evening, and were greatly enjoyed by an audience that taxed the capacity of the commodious edifice. The entertainment consisted

STURGEON'S

Leaders in Groceries.

THE RUSH still continues at my store and since I have adopted the CASH or 30 DAY PLAN, ALL CUSTOMERS ARE TREATED JUST ALIKE. No one can sell goods at close prices on long time, so I have "cut that out," preferring to sell on CASH MARGINS and get my money in time to take the benefit of cash discounts. So everybody, regardless of politics, religions, color or whether YOU ARE WET OR DRY, may have the benefit of the LOW PRICES at my store.

I have SUGARED a great many people within the past ten days, but there are still a number of people who have not been able to get in, so I will CONTINUE to sell the best ARBUCKLES CANE SUGAR (not beet) at 5c. in 1 to 25 pound lots, and there are FULL 25 LBS IN EACH SACK, and ONLY COSTS YOU $1.25. Some of my competitors are telling you that my sacks are light weight, and that I am giving you beet instead of Cane Sugar. Now, every sane person knows that ARBUCKLES SUGAR IS MADE OF CANE, and that the lettering on the sacks is RED and that is just what I am selling. They must take you for a fool.

Prices on Sugar may change at any time and without notice, and the change will be for a higher price, so if you are interested come at once. Mr. James E. Brunner, one of my new clerks, will be able to talk to our German friends.

Dog Responsible for Fire.

An alarm of fire sent in from box 23 about 11:35 o'clock Thursday morning called the Central company to the barn of Dr. D. M. Smith, 66 North Second street. Mrs. Smith had been burning some papers in the yard and it is supposed that one of the bloodhounds belonging to Dr. Smith carried a piece of the burning paper near the barn, or it had blown there, and someone seeing the smoke, sent in the alarm. The fire was communicated to some straw in the barn, but it was quickly extinguished by a chemical from the Consumers Brewery.

FESTIVITIES
IN ORDERCelebrations Will Occur at Nearly All the Churches and Little Ones Will be Made Happy.The weather man does not appear to favor a "white Christmas" this year and judging from the forecasts received Thursday, warmer weather with rain may be the program. However, dark and cloudy or bright and clear, the Christmas festivities will be carried on just the same, and sad faces will be made to beam with gladness, and laughter to shine in the erstwhile tearful eyes of many a childish countenance.The day will be observed in all the churches by the Sunday schools, many of whom are holding Christmas exercises this evening. The County Children's Home will be the scene of the annual holiday program this evening and tomorrow the turkey feast will take place at the institution. The prisoners of the county and city will likewise be given pleasant reminders of the season.The Salvation Army will pass out the hundreds of baskets of Christmas buddies this evening from 5 o'clock until 8, while workers from other charity organizations will call in person and deliver goods to the worthy poor. Saturday, the Army's entertainment for the children, and the surprise awaiting them, promises to be a holiday event of importance for many youngsters whose Christmas would otherwise be one of sadness.The various churches will observe Christmas day with the usual services. The regular masses of the occasion will be held at all Catholic churches in the county. The three principal masses at St. Francis de Sales church tomorrow morning will be at 5, 7:30 and 9:30 o'clock. The usual season decorations have been placed about the church, giving it an extremely beautiful appearance.The heaviest trade of the present holiday season was that of Wednesday, according to the statements of several merchants. Clerks were kept bustling until late closing hours, and these buyers of Christmas presents who did not heed the admonition to do their shopping early, seemed to be making up for lost time by using additional energy in pushing through the crowds, making purchases and departing to the next stand.At the postoffice and the express offices the rush of the past three or four days has been something fierce.
Extra clerks were kept on the move at the post office, and the registry department of the local office did a business which to date far exceeds that of any preceding year. Postmaster Henry, Assistant PostmasterSiegfried, and all the clerks they could use, were engaged at the office Wednesday night. An extra window in the private office of the postmaster was opened, turning that place into an additional space for the registry department, where a long line of people was to be seen all afternoon and evening.MUSICAL PROGRAM AT ST. FRAN-

Number of Offenders Picked Up by Patrolmen—Foreigners Have Cutting Alfalfa.Officers Moore and McClure picked up C. E. Gobbert of Hartford, W. Va., at the Pan Handle depot last night at 1:55 o'clock, and slated him with pocket picking. The stranger was said to have frisked the pockets of a man named Priest, who was at the depot. The man was not arraigned before the mayor this morning.Triuk Moasin appeared before the mayor Thursday and filed an affidavit against Nick Cuida, a Roumanian, charging him with cutting to wound.
The trouble took place in the Heisey glass factory, while Cuida was eating an apple with a knife. He said that Moasin tickled him, and when he jumped away from him he accidentally struck him with the knife, and inflicting a small gash in Moasin's right forearm.Both men live at Theresa Lauch, Case avenue. The offense was not proven, and the case was continued until 1 o'clock this afternoon.Charles Cavanaugh giving his home for being drunk. He was given the usual $1 and costs.W. Valenti, whose home is in England, he claims, and C. Thomas of Ch. St. P., were arrested last night in the R. & O. yard by Detective Meyer charged with interfering. The men are brothers and pleaded guilty to the charge. They promised to get out of town and were dismissed.J. W. Hudson, a well known R. & evade declaration of choice to hide behind a convenient cover.Two years ago Daugherty joined hands with Burton at Dayton to overthrow Foraker and Dick, who were themselves in a new alliance. Together they rallied behind the Taft banner and destroyed the old state machine. Both wanted the senatorship, but Burton has proved the stronger, and again Daugherty goes to the rear.It may be that Burton will be able to derive some advantage from this action, for it releases votes at a time when the Taft organization wants to keep them tied up.So far as Daugherty was concerned it was time for him to act, and he did not delay. It will not be long before his example will be followed by others. Conditions invite it and necessity will force it.Before departing for Cincinnati to attend Christmas holidays, Charles P.

Taft fired a Partisan arrow toward Congressman Theodore Burton.
Sneeringly adhering to his demand for a party caucus as against an open contest in joint senatorial convention in the General Assembly, Taft opened the question of eligibility as necessary by that inflexible protective tariff, and its full brother the paternal doctrine of subsidy.Incidentally he deftly touched the tender nerve of partisanship by suggesting that the alleged Burton plan might mean an alliance with the Democrats, giving them a voice in choosing the senator.

Newark Republicans' Choice.

The senatorial fight at Columbus is creating a great deal of interest all over the state. In order to obtain an expression as to the preference of leading local Republicans as to their choice of candidates, an

GRAFT CASES

Out of a mass of testimony it was learned that a majority of the council members have been "reached." In the passage of one ordinance alone it was testified that 69 councilmen had divided $15,000.The evidence as given showed conclusively the gigantic proportions of the graft system, and while insinuations have been made for some time that it was crooked, it was not believed they were any way near so bad as the evidence at the preliminary hearing proved them to be.W. W. Ramsey and A. A. Vilsack, former president and cashier of the German National bank, were first placed on trial. It was testified that they had been approached by Councilman John Klein, one of the accused, who stated that the bank would be made a depository for the city's funds in the event "the German National bank would do as other banks have done." After several conferences, the bankers placed $17,500 on a table in a room of the bank. Councilman Klein and a companion entered the room and a short time later he left thebank. The bankers then visited the room and the money was gone.At the request of the directors of the bank, both men resigned last Saturday. They were held for court in the sum of $14,000 bail each.The seven councilmen, President Brand and members Klein, Soffel, Wasson, Melaney and Ferguson of common council, and Atkinson of senior council, were then called for trial.The principal witness was Robert Wilson, a private detective and superintendent of the municipal league of Scranton, Pa., who is employed by the Voters' league of Pittsburg, which brings the prosecution against the nine defendants.Mr. Wilson's testimony was sensational in the highest degree. Aided by an assistant, Wilson engaged a room in a local hotel and, he testified, cut holes in the door and walls of an adjoining room. Then a series of meetings was arranged with councilmen.
His assistant, Herbert Jones, posed as a business man desiring certain ordinances passed, and during his conference with the councilmen, Wilson and a stenographer were stationed in the next room making a full record of the transaction.During these conferences, Councilman Klein had a great deal to say regarding how complete councils were controlled by the accused men, the defective said. It was also testified that Klein and Brand each accepted $500 from Jones in payment for securing the passage of an ordinance.At a meeting held in another hotel, Klein, it was testified, told Wilson how hard it was to divide money among the councilmen. To illustrate his remarks, Councilman Klein told of how $45,000 had to be split between 60 councilmen. This money was received in connection with the construction of filter beds at the new filtration plant of Pittsburg.Councilman Klein, Mr. Wilson testified, said that the councilmen had different prices. Some councilmen, Klein told him, wanted $100, some $75, some $25 and some $5. According to Councilman Klein, Wilson related, the 55 councilmen were known as "hoodlums."It was also possible to secure some councilman votes on some measures in return for a suit of clothes or street car tickets.
With the exception of Klein and Wasson, all of the defendants immediately renewed their bonds for appearance to court trial, and were released. In the aggregate the bond

BERT LARKIN

Well Known Throughout Licking County, Burns to Death in Fire at Xenia.

A telephone message was received at police headquarters Thursday morning conveying the information that Bert Larkin, a former well known character of this county, had been burned to death in a fire at Xenia Wednesday, although no particulars were given. Bert will be well remembered by many of the older residents of Licking county, and especially in Newark. He was possessed of ventriloquist powers seldom given to man, and for years made a practice of giving exhibitions in Licking and adjacent counties, principally in the smaller villages, and at remote school houses. On these pilgrimages he was always accompanied by his little son, who was a chip of the old block. They gave a good entertainment and pleased the country people. Poor "Happy Bert." He had this day, and many who read the news of his sad ending will express regret. Bert was possessed of a noble heart, and no one in distress was ever passed by when he was around. The last heard of him in Licking county, he was making his home at Johnstown or in the vicinity of that place. Later he went to Columbus, and became sick and was removed to an institution, where he was taken care of for a time.

THE TEST OF MERIT.

Newark People Are Given Convincing Proof.

No better test of any article can be made than the test of time and this is particularly true of a kidney medicine. Doan's Kidney Pills have stood this test and stood it well. What better proof of the merits of this remedy could you demand, than the statement of a Newark resident who has been cured and has stayed cured?

Read the following:
Hawley Speaks, 235 Boylston Ave., Newark, Ohio, says: "I was considerably annoyed by rheumatism and acute pains across my loins that made every movement painful. The kidney secretions also caused me much trouble, being frequent in passage and though I used various remedies, none gave me but slight relief. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention and I procured a box at Crayton's drug store. They gave me prompt relief, the pains in my back disappeared, my kidneys were invigorated and I felt much better in every way. I have had no return of the trouble since and I am always glad to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY

How to Save $2 on Cough Medicine by Making It at Home.

Cough medicines, as a rule, are mostly syrup. You can take a pint of Granulated Sugar, add half cup of water, stir and let boil just a moment. This makes a pint of syrup as good as you could buy. Get 3/4 ounces of Pinex, put in a clean pint bottle and fill up with the Granulated Sugar Syrup. The Granulated Sugar costs, say, 4 cents, and the Pinex 50 cents. The recipe makes a full pint of excellent cough syrup, which keeps indefinitely. A cost of about 54 cents. You couldn't buy as much ready-made cough syrup for $2.50. This shows a clear saving of about $2.

This home-made remedy will stop an obstinate, deep-seated cough quickly—usually in 24 hours. It is also splendid for colds, whooping cough, pains in the chest, bronchial troubles and similar ailments. Do not use this spoonful every one, two or three hours as required. The taste is very pleasant.

The effectiveness of this remedy is easily understood. The Syrup is an excellent sedative. The Pinex is an excellent valuable concentrated compound of Norway White Pine Extract, and contains all the natural elements which make the air of the pine forests so effective in curing tuberculosis. There are many pine tar and pine oil preparations, but in making cough syrup on this recipe be sure to use the real Pinex itself. Your druggist has it, or will gladly get it for you.

emony the couple will depart for a short wedding trip, and will probably make their future home in Pittsburgh. Miss Lowery was formerly in E. W. Murphy's insurance office in the Hilbert & Schaus building. She has a large number of friends in this city who will be surprised by the news of the marriage.

OBITUARY

MISS ALMENA ATKOLD.

Miss Almema Arnold, aged 17, a daughter of Mrs. Della Arnold, of Johnstown, died at St. Anthony's Hospital, Columbus, after an illness of three weeks with typhoid fever. The body was removed to her home Wednesday, and the funeral was held Thursday, the interment being made in the cemetery at that place.

DEATH OF OLD SOLDIER.

John D. Channell, a former Licking county man and a member of Co. B, 12th regiment, O. V. V. 1., and at the time of his death a member of Phil Sheridan post, G. A. R., Boise City, Idaho, died December 8, and was buried at that place December 9, with military honors, assisted by the I. O. O. F., of which society he was a member. Mr. Channell was a son of the late Captain Aaron Channell, of Co. E, 12th regiment, O. V. V. 1.; and a brother-in-law of William Hoffer, who resides north of Newark.

OBITUARY.

Melvinia Wilson was born in Muskingum county, O., May 9, 1827; died December 20, 1908, aged 81 years, 7 months and 11 days.

She was united in marriage to Stephen Dwigans in 1846, who departed this life May 24, 1869, aged 58 years and 9 months. Unto this union were born seven children, all of whom survive her except James Dwigans, who departed this life on November 20, 1895. The children: who survive her and so deeply mourn the loss of their kind and loving mother are Mrs. Della Ikenorn, Nantop, O.; Mrs. Nancy J. Austin, Frazzysburg, O.; Mr. Dan Dwigans, Chatham, O.; Mr. Lafe Dwigans, Frazzysburg, O.; Mr. Douglas Dwigans, South Madison; Mr. Eli Dwigans, Frazzysburg, O.; also 35 grandchildren, and 23 great grandchildren.

She was a good and loving mother and was loved by all who knew her. She united with the Presbyterian church at Frazzysburg in July, 1903 and to the day that her spirit was taken to her Maker she has been a diligent follower of Him who gave her that precious life.

It is God's will, so let us submit to Him that doeth all things well and who has called our loving mother to her eternal home in Heaven.

Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.

While her heart was pure
Her life was happy
And her peace is sure.

THE HIGHEST BIDDER WILL GET THESE VOTES

Columbus, Dec. 24.—The impartial onlooker can see the senatorial fight in its present situation and prospective outlook an unprecedented scramble. It is admitted on all sides that the Taft assets consist of the fact that his brother is President-elect and has the officers to give out and that he is the only millionaire among the aspirants. For this reason a large number of the Republican members are not committing themselves definitely. Some of them are absolutely holding aloof and their conduct and peculiar attitude indicate plainly that they propose to cast their votes for the highest bidder.

PARIS STUDENTS ENGAGED IN RIOT

Paris, Dec. 24.—The students and faculty of medicine, and the police engaged in a battle this morning over the ruling of the faculty granting diplomas. They stoned and egged the police and college buildings and were dispersed after injuring the prefect of police.

PETITION HAS BEEN WITHDRAWN BY THE "WETS"

Matter is Now Settled and Saloons Will Close on Thursday, Jan. 7. Other Court News.

Wednesday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock Mr. George Frommoltz, a petitioner in the action of the contest of the Local Option election, held in this county on Monday, December 7, Daniel Altshool and Harry Rosell, his bondsmen, together with Harry Kohn of Columbus, and W. D. Fulton, of this city, attorneys for the plaintiff, came into the Probate court and withdrew the petition filed and dismissed the case. This ends the matter of a contest in Licking county, as the petition must be filed within ten days after the election.

The indications were that there was a spectacular fight ahead, as the defendants in the case to set aside, the result of the election had filed a precise calling for 204 witnesses. The sheriff and his clerks had made out the subpoenas to be served on these witnesses, but as they had not been served at the time the contest was called off Wednesday evening, the work has gone for naught.

It is alleged that many more witnesses were to be subpoenaed, and it is difficult to estimate what the total costs in the case would have been.

Supplemental Petition.

In the case of Sarah M. Cramer vs. Charles T. Cramer and others, the plaintiff has filed a supplemental petition.

Answer to Cross Petition.

In the case of Frank B. Ransom vs. Simeon T. Cary, the plaintiff has filed an answer to the cross petition of the defendant, in which he denies all the allegations not specifically mentioned as being true. Plaintiff ask that the cross petition be dismissed and that he have the relief prayed for.

Answer of John H. Lynn.

In the case of Martha A. Lynn vs. Anna M. Trout and others, the defendant, John H. Lynn, has filed his answer. He admits all the allegations of the plaintiff and says that they are true. He further consents to the partition of the real estate, and waives his assignment of dower by metes and bounds and agrees to take the value thereof in money.

EX-SLAVES

REUNITED AFTER BEING SEPARATED SINCE THE WAR OF THE REBELLION.

Had Lived in the Same City Forty five Years—Happy Reunion of Sisters.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 24.—Two sisters, Amanda Twyman and Mary Frazier, aged negro women, who were slaves in the Goodloe family in Madison county and were separated before the Civil war, were reunited through the offices of "Uncle Andy" Hill, a grandson of Lemon Hill, the servant of Daniel Boone and the first slave mentioned in Kentucky history.

When one branch of the Goodloe family removed to Lexington in 1855 Mary Frazier came with them, leaving her sister Amanda in Madison county. Twenty-five years ago Amanda married a man named Twyman and came with him to Lexington. She had never heard that her sister had married Frazier and was unable to trace her, though living all these years within 20 miles of her and the last 25 years less than a mile away.

"Uncle Andy" who had known them both in their younger days, met Amanda yesterday for the first time since the war and told her of in the course of their conversation that her sister was living on Water street. He took Amanda to Mary's house, and there was great rejoicing when the two old women embraced.

Avoid Constipation Above All Things

Constipation may almost be called the curse of America. Nearly 9 out of 10 people need laxatives often; also need the liver regulated. Constipation and sluggish liver are not only uncomfortable, but dangerous. Typhoid, Appendicitis, etc., are the results. Look the facts squarely in the face. Don't you need to help the liver and bowels more than you do—don't you need to take fewer chances? But help them—don't force them—that is injurious. Use a mild laxative and a healing one.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

is the one effective substitute for calomel. They act gently, yet firmly and promptly. The olive oil in them is beneficial and at the same time is a laxative. You don't know its benefits until you have tried it. These tablets are the result of 15 years of development—15 years of constant practice among Dr. Edwards' patients. They contain all that Dr. Edwards knows after a lifetime of study and experiment. Must they not be good? Try them and see.

When you feel nervous, dull, irritable or "headachy" let Olive Tablets show what they are worth. All druggists have them. 15 tablets for 10c, 45 for 25c in packages. Made by THE OLIVE TABLET CO., BOSTON, Philadelphia, Pa.

WITNESS

In Hains Case May be Arrested for Perjury—Makes Conflicting Statements.

Flushing, L. I., Dec. 24.—Cabman Skura, who drove the Hains brothers to the scene of the shooting of Wm. Annis, on the stand this morning, told of finding a box of cartridges in the carriage, but owing to conflicting statements this was not admitted. On direct-examination he said he heard Thornton say: "We have got him now." Under a cross-examination he became so tangled that he all but denied this. Attorney McIntyre, of the defense, demanded that he be committed for perjury.

ESTABLISHED 1876.

Bentley's White Lily Catarrh Cure has become the leader. It's a necessity now in thousands of homes, because it is helpful, wholesome and clean. A scientific remedy. Strongly antiseptic and disinfectant, which renders it highly sanitary and prophylactic and contains nothing in the least harmful. No opiates, cocaine or mercury. After one trial it will make friends with you in spite of yourself. A prompt relief for sore throat, cough and colds. Ask your druggist. 25c.

DR. BOOKWALTER RESIGNS.

Westerville, Dec. 24.—Dr. Lewis Bookwalter, president of Otterbein university at Westerville, has resigned that position after a service of almost five years, and his resignation will take effect on the first of next June. It is probable that he will be succeeded by Dr. Lawrence Kiester, the present president of Lebanon college, at Annville, Pa.

Dr. Bookwalter intimates that there is some opposition to him, and that as a Christian gentleman he will not enter into any contest with them to retain his place.

Had a Close Call.

Mrs. Ada L. Croom, the widely known proprietor of the Croom Hotel, Vaughn, Miss., says: "For several months I suffered with a severe cough, and consumption seemed to have its grip on me, when a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery. I began taking it, and three bottles affected a complete cure." The fame of this life-saving cough and cold remedy, and lung and throat healer is world wide. Sold at Frank D. Hall's drug store. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Lancaster, Dec. 24.—Rev. E. T. Griffith, pastor of the United Presbyterian church for the past year, has left with his family for Bessemer, N. C., where he has accepted the pastorate of a church.

TRUNK FACTORY BURNS.
Cincinnati, Dec. 24.—The large factory of N. Drucker & Co., manufacturers of trunks and valises, situated at Ninth and Broadway, this city, was partially destroyed by fire last night, entailing a loss estimated at $75,000.

DENTISTRY FOR COWS.
Long Beach, Cal., Dec. 24.—The City Council is considering an ordinance to force dairymen and owners of cows to brush the teeth of their animals each morning in order to prevent possible spread of tuberculosis to human milk consumers. They are urged to do so by Dr. H. S. Tanner, the aged 40 day faster and advocate of vegetable and cereal food. Cows' teeth are weak teeth, he says, and the tartar which gathers on their teeth breeds germs. These germs are communicated to the milk they give and thus to humans. Keep the cows' teeth clean and live to a ripe old age, is Dr. Tanner's motto.

CHRISTMAS

A Little Lay Sermon by a Prominent Newark Man.

On the approach of the Christmas anniversary, it is well to recall the old story of what happened 1908 years ago.

In a Khan, or inn, in the "little town of Bethlehem," and among the Kine, for there was no guest room unoccupied, a Child was born. The surrounding circumstances suggested only poverty and humility. They laid the young Child in a manger. So far as we know, there was "lack of woman's nursing" or attention to the young mother. She and Joseph alone had an idea of the Divine character of the Child. It was to the people of the inn the birth of only a common boy.

But that heaven was not indifferent to this event fully appears. There were in the same country shepherds tending their flock by night, and lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them and the glory of the Lord shone round about them. Seeing that they were afraid, the angel, to comfort them, said, "fear not, for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people, for unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ, the Lord. Giving them a sign by which would find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger, suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men. Thus was God's affirmation.

tion to man of the Divine character of the Child.

Surely there is not in all the books in all the world as sweet a story as that of the visitation of the angel to the shepherds, as found in the second chapter of Luke!

But this was not the only contemporaneous proof of the Divine event. Certain wise men in the East, before the event, saw a star of the first magnitude possibly, lighting the Western sky. It was new, and it excited them as a prognostic of a great thing to happen. Independently, for they were perhaps at first widely separated, and by some Divine impulse or communication, they met, and set out upon the journey to seek Him "that is born King of the Jews," for they said, "we have seen His star in the East, and we have come to worship Him." They staid in Jerusalem, to King Herod, their mission. Leaving Jerusalem, the star went before them till it came and stood where the young Child was, and when they came into the house they saw Him with Mary, His mother, and fell down and worshipped Him, and gave Him the gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh.

We see, therefore, on one hand the lowliness of the birth of the Lord, and on the other hand that wonderful demonstration of the angel when the glory shone around the shepherds and the appearance of the multitude of heavenly host, and the striking coming of the wise men following the star, their worship of the young Child and their presentation of the magnificent gifts.

Neither did I, his mother, say so. That was the Tribune's mistake. He did take a top from a notion story and owned to it, and if we, his parents, had been the first ones notified, would have made the wrong right without further trouble. For God knows, I, his mother, do not want a penny's worth of me not get honest.

Along with the appropriate festivities of the season, the joyful meetings, and the exchange of gifts, we should ponder in our hearts the lesson of this birth, and make good the benediction of peace on earth and good will towards all men.

A cup of coffee, a bit of sausage and Mrs. Austin's buckwheat cakes, is a breakfast fit for a king.

WEBBER WON BOTH FALLS

Herbert Webber, the Newark wrestler, had very little trouble in winning from Louis Stelzer, the Quincy, Ill., champion at the Music Hall Wednesday night. Webber took the first two falls in 18 minutes.

Stelzer came to Newark, touted as a man of ability, and the first go seemed to back the assertion, for Webber struggled with his opponent just 15 minutes before he downed him. The second fall was easy, for Stelzer couldn't stand the skill of his opponent with the result that he was downed in just three minutes.

A good crowd was present to see the struggle between the two men.

Rex Beach's Great New Story

HIS new novel and his BEST — starts in Hampton's Magazine for January. His masterpiece. Stronger than "The Barrier"—more powerful than "The Spoilers."

Don't miss the spell of the opening chapters. Start when the story starts. If you've ever read "The Spoilers" or "The Barrier" you know what this story is. We tell you it is the BEST, most enthralling story Rex Beach has ever written.

"THE SILVER HORDE" will be "the serial of the year." The hundreds of thousands of readers who have followed with keen interest the joys and sorrows of beautiful Cherry Malotte, one of the best loved heroines in fiction, will find her life story completed in this newest — and last — of Rex Beach's Yukon romances.

The story centers around a young goldseeker who becomes interested in trying to start a salmon cannery, but finds himself blocked by a Trust organized by a Chicago railroad president. He is in love with the president's daughter, and his partner in the salmon cannery is Cherry Malotte. Almost every chapter portrays a crisis in which these vigorous characters are entangled. It is a big, new, vigorous, full-blooded American story. It breathes the strong spirit of the great North country, the vivid elements of love, danger, adventure, romance and of big business.

The Little Gray Lady

By P. Hopkinson Smith

Author of "Colonel Carter of Cartersville," "The Fortunes of Oliver Horn," etc.

Copyright 1908 by Benj. B. Hampton.

ONCE in a while there came to me out of the long ago the fragments of a story I have not thought of for years—one that has been hidden in the dim lumber room of my brain where I store my bygone memories.

These fragments thrust themselves out of the past as do the cuffs of an old-fashioned coat, the flutings of a founce, or the lacings of a bodice from out a quickly opened bureau drawer. Only when you follow the cuff along the sleeve to the broad shoulder, smooth out the crushed frill that swayed about her form, and trace the silken thread to the waist it tightened, can you determine the fashion of the day in which they were worn.

And with the rummaging of this lumber room come the odors: the smells from dusty old trunks packed with bundles of faded letters and worthless deeds tied with red tape; musty smells from dust-covered chests, iron-bound, holding moldy books, their backs loose; pungent smells from cracked wardrobes stuffed with moth-eaten hunting coats, riding trousers, and high boots with rusty spurs—cross-country riders these—roisterers and gamblers—a sorry lot, no doubt.

Or perhaps it is an old bow-legged high-boy—its clutched slipped on easy rollers—the kind with deep drawers kept awake by rattling brass handles, its outside veneer so highly polished that you are quite sure it must have been brought up in some distinguished family. The scent of old lavender and spicer rose leaves, and a sick or two of white orris root, haunt this relic of my lady's long white mitts—they reach from her dainty knuckles quite to her elbow. And so must her cobwebbed silk stockings and the filmy kerchief she folds across her bosom.

It is this kind of a drawer that I am opening now—one belonging to the Little Gray Lady.

As I look through its contents my eyes resting on the finger of an old fan, the end of a lace scarf, and the handle of an olive fan, my mind goes back to the last time she wore them. Then I begin turning everything upside down, lifting the corner of this incident, prying under that bit of talk, trying to find what he said and who told it (I shall have the whole drawer empty before I get through), and whose fault it was that the match was broken off, and why she, of all women in the world, should have remained single all those years. Why, too, she should have lost her identity, so to speak, and become the Little Gray Lady.

And yet no sobriquet could better express her personality. She was little—a dainty, elf-like littleness, with tiny feet and wee hands; she was gray—a soft, silver gray—too gray for her forty years (and this fragment begins when she was forty); and she was a lady in every beat of her warm heart; in every pressure of her white hand; in her voice, speech—in all her thoughts and movements.

She lived in the quaintest of old houses fronted by a brick path bordered with fragrant box, which led up to an old-fashioned porch, its door brightened by a brass knocker. This, together with the knobs, steps, and slits of windows on each side of the door, was kept scrupulously clean by old Margaret, who had lived with her for years.

But it was her personality and not her surroundings that lingers in my memory. No one ever heard anything sweeter than her voice; and nobody ever looked into a lovelier face, even if there were little hollows in the cheeks and shy, furtive wrinkles lurking about the corners of her lambent brown eyes. Nor did her gray hair mar her beauty. It was not old, dry and withered—a wispy gray! (That is not the way it happened.) It was a new, all-of-a-sudden gray, and in less than a week—so Margaret once told me—bleaching its brown gold to silver. But the gloss remained, and so did the richness of the folds, and the wealth and weight of it.

Inside the green-painted door with its white trim and brass knocker and knobs there was a narrow hall hung with old portraits, opening into a room literally full of fireplaces. Here there were gaily sofas, and five or six big easy chairs ranged in a half circle, with arms held out as if begging somebody to sit in them; and here, too, was an embroidered worsted fire screen that slid up and down a standard, to shield one's face from the blazing logs; and there were queer tables and old-gold curtains looped back with brass rosettes—ears really—behind which the tresses of the parted curtains were tucked; and there were more old portraits in dingy frames, and samplers under glass, and a rug which some aunt had made with her own hands from odds and ends; and a huge wicker basket spilling worsteds, and last, and by no manner of means least, a big chintz-covered rocking chair, the Little Lady's very own—its thin ankles and splay feet hidden by a modest frill. There were all these things and a lot more—and yet I still maintain that the room was just one big fireplace. Not alone because of the size (and it certainly was big. Many a doubting curlew head, losing faith in Santa Claus, has crawled behind the old fire dogs, the child's fingers tight about the Little Gray Lady's, and been told to look up into the blue—a lesson never forgotten all their lives), but because of the wonderful and never told forgotten things which constantly took place before its blazing embers.

For this fireplace was the Little Gray Lady's altar. Here she dispensed wisdom and cheer and love. Everybody in Pomford Village had sat in one or the other of the chairs grouped about it and had poured out their hearts to her. All sorts of pourings: love affairs, for instance, that were hopeless until she would take the girl's hand in her own and smooth out the tangle; to say nothing of bickerings behind closed doors, with two lives pulling apart until her dear arms brought them together.

But all this is only the outside of the old mahogany high-boy with its meerschaum-pipe polish, spraddling legs, and rattling handles.

Now for the Little Gray Lady's own particular drawer.

It was Christmas Eve, and Kate Dayton, one of Pomford's pretty girls, had found the Little Gray Lady sitting alone before the fire gazing into the ashes, her small frame almost hidden in the roomy chair. The winter twilight had long since settled and only the flickering blaze of the logs and the dim glow from one lone candle illumined the room. This, strange to say, was placed on a table in a corner where its rays shed but little light in the room.

"Oh! Cousin Annie," moaned Kate (everybody in Pomford who got close enough to touch the Little Gray Lady's hand called her "Cousin Annie"—it was only the outside world who knew her by her sobriquet), "I didn't mean anything. Mark came in just at the wrong minute, and—"

"Don't let him go, dearie," came the answer, when she had heard the whole story, the girl hands stroking the fluff of golden hair disheveled in her grief.

"Oh, but he won't stay!" moaned Kate. "He says he is going to Rio—way out to South America to join his Uncle Harry."

"He won't go, dearie—not if you tell him the truth. And make him tell you the truth. Don't let your pride come in, don't beat around the bush nor make believe you are hurt or misunderstood, or that you don't care. You do care. Better be a little humble now than humble all your life. It only takes a word. Hold out your hand and say: 'I'm sorry, Mark—please forgive me.' If he loves you—and he does—"

The girl raised her head: "Oh! Cousin Annie! How do you know?"

She laughed gently. "Because he was here, dearie, half an hour ago and told me so. He thought you owed him the dance, and he was a little jealous of Tom."

"But Tom had asked me—"

"Yes—and so had Mark—"

"Yes—but he had no right—"

She was up in arms again; she wouldn't—she couldn't—and again an outburst of tears choked her words.

The Little Gray Lady had known Kate's mother, now dead, and what might have happened but for a timely word—and she knew to her own sorrow what had happened for want of one. Kate and Mark should not repeat that experience if she could help it. She had saved the mother in the days gone by just such a word. She would save the daughter in the same way. And the two were just alike—same slight, girlish figure; same blond hair and blue eyes, same expression, and the same impetuous, high-strung temperament. "If that child's own mother walked in this minute I couldn't tell 'em apart, they do favor one another so," old Margaret had told her mistress when she opened the door for the girl, and she was right. Pomford village was full of those hereditary likenesses. Mark Dabney, whom all the present trouble was about, was so like his father at his age that his Uncle Harry had picked Mark out on a crowded dock when the lad had visited him in Rio the year before, although he had not seen the boy's father for twenty years—so strong was the family likeness.

If there was to be a quarrel it must not be between the Dabneys and the Daytons, of all families. There had been suffering enough in the old days. "Listen, dearie," she said in her gentle, crooning tone, patting the girl's cheek as she talked. "A quarrel where there is no love is soon forgotten, but a difference when both love may, if not quickly healed, leave a scar that will last through life."

"There are as good fish in the sea as were ever caught," cried the girl in sheer bravado, brushing away her tears.

"Don't believe it, dearie—and don't ever say it. That was wrecked more lives than you know. That is what I once knew a girl to say—a girl just about your age."

"But she found somebody else, and that's just what I am going to do. I'm not going to have Mark read me a lecture every time I want to do something he doesn't like. Didn't your girl find somebody else?"

"No—never. She is still unmarried."

"Yes—but it wasn't her fault, was it?"

"Yes—although she did not know it at the time. She opened a door suddenly and found her lover alone with another girl. The two had stolen off together where they would not be interrupted. He was pleading for his college friend—straightening out just some such foolish quarrel as you have had with Mark—but the girl would not understand until she knew the truth until a year afterwards. Then it was too late."

The Little Gray Lady stopped, lifted her hand from the girl's head, and turned her face toward the now dying fire.

"And what became of him?" asked the girl in a hushed voice, as if she dared not awaken the memory.

"He went away and she has never seen him since."

For some minutes there was silence, then Kate said in a braver tone:

"And he married somebody else?"

"No."

"Well, then, she died?"

The Little Lady had not moved, nor had she taken her eyes from the blaze. She seemed to be addressing some invisible body who could hear and understand. The girl felt its influence and a tremor ran through her. The flitting blaze casting weird shadows helped this feeling. At last, with an effort, she asked:

"You say you know them both, Cousin Annie?"

"Yes—he was my dear friend. I was just thinking of him when you came in."

The charred logs broke into a heap of coals; the blaze flickered and died. But for the lone candle in the corner the room would have been in total darkness.

"Shall I light another candle, Cousin Annie?" shivered the girl, "or bring that one nearer?"

"No, it's Christmas Eve, and I only light one candle on Christmas Eve."

"But what's one candle? Why, father has the whole house as bright as day and every fire blazing."

The girl sprang to her feet and stepped nearer the hearth. She would be less nervous, she thought, if she moved about, and then the warmth of the fire was somehow reassuring.

"Please let me light them all, Cousin Annie," she pleaded, reaching out her hand toward a cluster in an old-fashioned candelabra—"and if there aren't enough I'll get more from Margaret."

"No, no—one will do. It is an old custom of mine; I've done it for twenty years."

"But don't you love Christmas?" Kate argued, her nervousness increasing. The ghostly light and the note of pain in her companion's voice were strangely affecting.

The Little Gray Lady leaned forward in her chair and looked long and steadily at the heap of smoldering ashes; then she answered slowly, each word vibrating with the memory of some hidden sorrow: "I've had mine, dearie."

"But you can have some more," urged Kate. "Not like those that have gone before, dearie—no, not like those."

Something in the tones of her voice and quick droop of the dear head stirred the girl to her depths. Sinking to her knees she hid her face in the Little Lady's lap.

"And you sit here in the dark with only one candle?" she whispered.

"Yes, always," she answered, her fingers stroking the fair hair. "I can see those I have loved better in the dark. Sometimes the room is full of people; I have often to strain my eyes to assure myself that the door is really shut. All sorts of people come—the girls and boys I knew when I was young. Some are dead; some are far away; some so near that should I open the window and shout their names many of them could hear. There are fewer about ground every year—but I welcome all who come. It's the old maid's hour, you know—this twilight hour. The wives are making ready the supper; the children are romping; lovers are together in the corner where they can whisper and not be overheard. But none of this disturbs me—no big man bursts in, letting in the cold. I have my chair, my candle, my thoughts, and my fire. When you get to be my age, Kate, and live alone—you will love these twilight hours, too."

The girl reached up her hands and touched the Little Gray Lady's cheek, whispering:

"But aren't you very, very lonely, Cousin Annie?"

"Yes, sometimes."

For a moment Kate remained silent, then she asked in a faltering voice through which ran a note almost of terror:

"Do you think I will ever be like—like—that is—I will ever be—all alone?"

"I don't know, dearie. No one can ever tell what will happen. I never thought twenty years ago I would be all alone—but I am."

The girl raised her head, and with a cry of pain threw her arms around the Little Gray Lady's neck.

"Oh, no!—no! I can't bear it!" she sobbed. "I'll tell Mark! I'll send for him now—to-night—before I go to bed!"

It was not until Kate Dabney reached her father's gate that the spell of her own thoughts broke. The dim glow of the candle was off. The crisp air of the winter night for it was now quite dark—had helped, but the sight of Mark's waiting figure striding along the snow-covered path to her home, and his manly, outspoken apology, "Please forgive me, Kate, I made an awful fool of myself," followed by her joyous refrain, "Oh, Mark! I've been so wretched! I had done more. It had all come just as Cousin Annie had said; there had been neither pride nor anger."

Only the Little Gray Lady's timely word. But if the spell was broken the pathetic figure of the dear woman, her eyes fixed on the dying embers, still lingered in Kate's mind.

"Oh, Mark, it is so pitiful to see her!—and I got so frightened; the whole room seemed filled with ghosts. Christmas seems her loneliest time. She won't have but one candle lighted, and she sits and mopes in the dark. Oh, it's dreadful! I tried to cheer her up, but she says she likes to sit in the dark, because then all the dead people she loves can come to her. Can't we do something to make her happy? She is so lovely, and she is so little, and she is so dear!"

They had entered the house, now a blaze of light. Kate's father was standing on the hearth rug, his back to a great fireplace filled with roaring logs.

"Where have you two gadabouts been?" he laughed merrily. "What do you mean by staying out this late? Don't you know it's Christmas Eve?"

"We've been to see Cousin Annie, daddy; and it would make your heart ache to look at her! She's there all alone. Can't you go down and bring her up here?"

"Yes, I could, but she wouldn't come, not on Christmas Eve. Did she have her candle burning?"

"Yes, just one poor little miserable candle that hardly gave any light at all."

"And it was in the corner on a little table?"

"Yes, all by itself."

"Poor dear, she always lights it. She's lighted it for almost twenty years."

"Is it for somebody she loved who died?"

"No—it's for somebody she loved who is alive, but who never came back and won't."

He studied them both for a moment, as if in doubt, then he added in a determined voice, motioning them to a seat beside him:

"It is about time you two children heard the story straight, for it concerns you both, so I'll tell you. Your Uncle Harry, Mark, is the man who never came back and won't. He was just your age at the time. He and Annie were to be married in a few months, then everything went to smash. And it was your mother, Kate, who was the innocent cause of his exile. Harry, who was the best friend I had in the world, tried to put in a good word for me—this was before I and your mother were engaged—and Annie, coming in and finding them, got it all crooked. Instead of waiting until Harry could explain she flared up and off he went. Her hair turned white in a week when she found out how she had misjudged him, but it was too late then—Harry wouldn't come back, and he never will. When he told you, Mark, last year in Rio that he was coming home Christmas I knew he'd change his mind just as soon as you left him, and he did. Queer boy, Harry. Once he gets an idea in his head it sticks there. He was that way when he was a boy. He'll never come back as long as Annie lives, and that means never."

SHE FOUND HER LOVER ALONE WITH ANOTHER GIRL.

He stopped a moment, spread his fingers to the blazing logs, and then with a smile on his face, said: "If ever I catch you two young turtles doves making such fools of yourselves, I'll turn you both outdoors," and again his hearty laugh rang through the cheery room.

The girl instinctively leaned closer to her lover. She had heard some part of the story before—in fact, both of them had, but never in its entirety. Her heart went out to the Little Gray Lady all the more.

Mark now spoke up. He, too, had had an hour of his own with the Little Gray Lady, and the obligation still remained unsettled.

"Well, if she won't come up here and have Christmas with us," he cried, "why can't we go down there and have Christmas with her? Let's surprise her, Kate! Let's clean out all those dead people! I know she sits in the dark and imagines that all come back, for I've seen her that way many a time when I drop in on her in the late afternoon. Let's show her they're alive!"

Kate started up and caught Mark's arm. "Oh, Mark! I have it!" she whispered, "and we will too—that will be the very thing," and so with more mumblings and mutterings, not one word of which could her father hear, the two raced upstairs to the top of the house and the garret.

Two hours later a group of young people led by Mark Dabney trooped out of Kate's gate and turned down the Little Gray Lady's street. Most of them wore long cloaks and were muffled in thick velvets.

They were talking in low tones, glancing from side to side as if fearing to be seen. The moon had gone under a cloud, but the light of the stars, aided by an isolated street lamp, showed them the way. So careful were they to conceal their identity that the whole party—there were six in all—would dart into an open gate, crouching behind the snow-laden hedge to avoid even a single passer-by. Only once were they in any danger, and that was when a sleigh gliding by stopped in front of them, the driver calling out in a voice which sounded twice as loud in the white stillness: "Where's Mr. Dabney's new house?" (evidently a stranger, for the town pump was not better known). No one else saw them until they reached the Little Gray Lady's porch.

Kate crept up first, followed by Mark, and peered in. So far as she could see everything was just as she had left it.

"The candle is still burning, Mark, and she's put more wood on the fire. But I can't find her. Oh, yes—there she is—in her big chair—you can just see the top of her head and her hand. Hush! don't one of you breathe. Now, listen, girls! Mark and I will tiptoe in first—the front door is never fastened—and if she is asleep—and I think she is—we will all crouch down behind her until she wakes up."

"And another thing," whispered Mark from behind his hand—"everybody must drop their coats and things in the hall, so we can surprise her all at once."

The strange procession tiptoed in and arranged itself behind the Little Gray Lady's chair. Kate was dressed in her mother's wedding gown, flaming poke bonnet, and long, faded gloves clasped to her shoulder; Mark had on a blue coat with brass buttons, a buff waistcoat, and black stock, the two points of the high collar pinching his ruddy cheeks—the same dress his father and Uncle Harry had worn, and all the young bloods of their day, for that matter. The others were in their grandmother's or grandfather's short and long clothes, Tom Fields sporting a tight-sleeved, high-collared coat, silk embroidered waistcoat, and pumps.

Kate crept up behind her chair, but Mark moved to the fireplace and rested his elbow on the mantel, so that he would be in full view when the Little Gray Lady awoke.

At last her eyes opened, but she made no outcry, nor did she move, except to lift her head as does a fawn startled by some sudden light, her wondering eyes drinking in the apparition. Mark, breathing, stood like a statue, but Kate, bending closer, heard her catch her breath with a long, indrawn sigh, and next the half-audible words: "No—it isn't so—How foolish I am!"

Then there came softly: "Harry—" and again in almost a whisper—as if hope had died in her heart—"Harry—"

Kate, half frightened, sprang forward and flung her arms around the Little Gray Lady.

"Why, don't you know him? It's Mark, Cousin Annie, and here's Tom and Nanny Fields, and everybody, and we're going to light all the candles—every one of them, and make an awful big fire—and have a real, real Christmas."

The Little Gray Lady was awake now.

"Oh! you scared me so!" she cried, rising to her feet, rubbing her eyes. "You foolish children! I must have been asleep—yes, I know I was!" She greeted them all, talking and entering into their fun, the spirit of hospitality now hers, saying over and over again how glad she was they came, kissing one and another; telling them how happy they made her, how since they had been kind enough to come, she would let them have a real Christmas—"Only," she added quickly, "it will have to be by the light of one candle, but that won't make any difference, because you can pile on just as much wood as you choose. Yes," she continued, her voice rising in her effort to meet them on their own joyous plane—"pile on all the kindling, too, Mark; and Kate, dear, please, please, tell Margaret to bring in every bit of cake she has in the pantry. Oh, how like your mother you are, Kate! I remember that very dress. And you, Mark! Why, you've got on the same coat I saw your father wear at the Governor's ball. And you, too, Tom. Oh, what a good time we will all have."

Soon the lid of the old piano was raised, a spinet, really, and one of the girls began running her fingers over the keys, and later on it was agreed that the first dance was to be the Virginia reel, with all the hospitable chairs and the fire screen and the gaily old sofa rolled back against the wall.

This all arranged, Mark took his place with the Little Gray Lady for a partner, the music struck up a lively tune and as quickly ceased. The sound of bells rang through the night air, and in the hush that followed a sleigh was heard at the gate.

Kate sprang up and clapped her hands. "Oh, they are just in time! There come the rest of them, Cousin Annie. Now we are going to have a great party! Let's be dancing when they come in; keep on playing!"

At this instant the door opened and Margaret put in her head. "Somebody," she said, with a low bow, "wants to see Mr. Mark on business."

Mark, looking like a gallant of the old school, excused himself with a great flourish to the Little Gray Lady and strode out. In the hall, with his back to the light, stood a broad-shouldered man, muffled to the chin in a fur overcoat. The boy was about to apologize for his costume, and then ask the man's errand, when the stranger turned quickly and gripped his wrist.

"Hush—not a word! Where is she?" he cried. Mark gave a low whistle of surprise and pushed open the door. The stranger stepped in.

The Little Gray Lady raised her head.

"And who can this new guest be?" she asked—and in what a queer costume, too!"

The man drew himself up to his full height and threw wide his coat: "And you don't know me, Annie?"

He did not take her eyes from his face, nor did he deign to turn his head once, nor peeringly to the room as if she feared they were playing her another trick.

He had reached her side and stood looking down at her. Again came the voice—a strong, clear voice, with a note of infinite tenderness through it. "How white your hair is, Annie dear; and your hands so thin. Have I changed like this?"

She leaned forward, scanning him eagerly. There was a little cry, then all her soul went out in the one word:

"Harry!"

She was inside the big coat now, his strong arms around her, her head hidden on his breast, only the tips of her toes on the floor.

When he had kissed her again and again—and he did and he kissed everybody—he crossed the room, picked up the ghostly candle, and smothered its flame.

"I saw it from the road," he laughed softly. "That's why I couldn't wait. But you'll never have to light it again, my darling!"

I saw them both a few years later. Everything in the way of fading and wrinkling had stopped far as the Little Gray Lady was concerned. There were any lines left in her forehead around the corners of her eyes, I could not tell. Joy had planted a crop of dimples in Margaret's face, and she had smoothed the care in her brown gold once more, but then Margaret was a woman of the world, and believed everything mistress wished.

And now if you don't mind, dear reader we put everything back and shut the Little Gray Lady's bureau drawer.

the Wehrle foundry and his friends in the big foundry contributed in no small degree towards the winner's success. Teckla has three sisters and one brother. The capture of the first prize will help to make Christmas a merry one in the Ruff household on Jefferson street.

John Callan, who came within two points of equalling Miss Teckla's record, is one of the Advocate's hustling carrier boys. He is the 14-year-old son of Officer John Callan of the city police force, whose friends are legion. John is in the fifth grade of the St. Francis de Sales school and carries Route No. 13 for the Advocate. He isn't an unlucky one for John. He has already put a part of his $20 prize in the bank and is using the balance to make his friends and himself happy on Christmas day.

Ren Comisford of Hebron, is the bright little son of Mr. William Comisford, the well known baker, and is the Advocate's energetic agent at Hebron. He is delighted over the support given by his friends and is happy to know that $15 in gold awaits him at this office.

Andrew Goebel, aged 13, son of Otto Goebel, glassblower, is an Advocate carrier on Route No. 1. He is in the Sixth grade of St. Francis de Sales school and is a lad full of vim and hustle.

Smiling as he accepted a new $10 gold piece, Andrew was asked what he intended to do with his prize. "I'm going to give it to my mother, who needs a little money to buy some things just now," was his reply. "Then he quickly added: 'I wish you would thank my friends for me through your paper.'"

Roy Kiefer, winner of the fifth prize, is the bright little son of Mr. John Kiefer, corner of Fifth and Church streets. He attends school at the Central house.

George Winters, aged 13, is in the seventh grade of the Catholic school.

GEORGE WINTERS.

He is the son of Mr. Frank Winters, 15 & O. molder, 45 South Sixth street, and is a hustler. He has won prizes in three other contests.

William Schopen, son of John Schopen, engineer at Wehrle's foundry, is 13 years old and lives at 373 Woods avenue. William is another energetic carrier boy for the Advocate. He is in the sixth grade of St. Francis school.

Frank Ryan, who is among the winners, has carried the Advocate for about seven years, which shows that he possesses the admirable quality of stick-to-it-iveness. He is the son of Mr. Edward F. Ryan, B. & O. engineer, 54 Dewey avenue. Frank attends the East Newark school.

John Papanek is 14. He is in the sixth grade of the St. Francis school and is the son of Anton Papanek, policeman at the Wehrle foundry.

William Giblin, son of Thomas Giblin, of the Heisey factory, lives at 426 Maiden street. He is 14, attends school in East Newark, seventh grade, and is a substitute carrier for the Advocate.

Harold Vogel, aged 12, is the son of

SETTLEMENT

WILL PROBABLY BE MADE WITH HOLLAND BY NEW GOVERNMENT.

Forces Clash and Many Are Wounded—United States Gunboat Arrives at Caracas.

The Hague, Dec. 24.—Dispatches say that the former foreign minister for Venezuela has left for The Hague to affect settlement with Holland for the new government.

Castro is still confident that friends will rally to his aid to regain the leadership. The Germans look upon him as a deposed man. His chances for making a loan there are very slight.

Caracas, Dec. 24.—In a clash this afternoon between thousands of supporters of Gomez, gathered for a demonstration, and a few Castro supporters, two anti-Castro men were killed and a hundred were wounded on both sides. The United States gunboat Dolphin arrived this afternoon and was given a great welcome.

Only the arrival of troops prevented a heavy loss of life during the riots between the rival factions. Many speeches were made to the crowd after quiet was restored, condemning Castro and pledging support to the new government.

Castro issued a statement today saying he would not put anything in the way of the new government. He hopes it succeeds in settling the disputes that now involve the country, and says: "If my effacement from the republic is necessary to this end I accept the situation gladly."

INVALID

Burned to Death at Sandusky and Charred Body Found in Cistern.

Sandusky, Dec. 24.—Bertha Leeders, 47, an invalid, was burned to death in a fire that destroyed her home at Bogerts Corners early this morning, where she lived alone. The fire was discovered by neighbors but too late to save the house or occupant. Her charred body was found in the cistern after the house had burned.

FIRE AT LIMA

Destroys Big Livery Stable, 35 Head of Horses, and Six Dwelling Houses.

Lima, Dec. 24.—Fire which started in a livery stable at midnight was extinguished this morning after causing $50,000 loss. For a time the fire threatened to destroy the business section of the town. Six dwellings, a livery barn and 35 horses were destroyed.

SWINDLERS

Pass Nearly $400,000 In Spurious Notes—Man and Woman Worked the Scheme.

New York, Dec. 24.—Police are convinced that clever swindlers are at work in several cities in the west and east passing spurious notes. In cases where the swindler was discovered it has been a man and woman who worked the scheme. They claim they are tourists and pass foreign notes. They have collected nearly $400,000 in this manner.

COAL PEACE-BOARD ISSUES A REPORT

The Board of Conciliation, established by the Anthracite Strike Commission to settle disputes between the mine workers and the operators, has issued a report covering the first three years of its work. The volume contains 325 pages and gives a full account of the board's activities in the way of mediation.

In the forthcoming discussion between the operators and the mine workers this record of the Conciliation Board will take an important part: the tribunal will cease to exist after April 1 if the miners win their point. One of the demands recently submitted to the union conference at Scranton calls for the abolition of the board.
